A low-angle photograph of the Empire Building facade. The building is a grand, classical-style structure with a prominent portico supported by tall, fluted columns. The facade is composed of three main sections separated by these columns. Each section contains three rows of windows. The windows are arranged in a grid pattern, with three windows per row. The building's exterior is light-colored, possibly limestone or marble. At the top of the building, a decorative cornice features the words "EMPIRE BUILDING" in large, bold, capital letters. Above the cornice, a small, ornate structure, likely a clock tower or observation deck, is visible against a clear blue sky. An American flag is flying on a tall pole to the left of the building.
